

Anca Grozav

Chief Deputy Director, OSBM

Anca is the Chief Deputy Director of the North Carolina Office of State Budget and Management (OSBM) as of November 1, 2022. In her role, Anca oversees the main functions of the office: providing budget and policy analysis to decisionmakers, executing the enacted budget, developing revenue and population estimates, and improving state operational efficacy.

Anca joined OSBM in 2009. She started as an Economic Analyst in charge of reviewing regulatory impact analyses in the Economic & Demographic Analysis section. In 2016, she was promoted to managing this section and acting as an Assistant State Budget Officer. She was in this role until joining the senior leadership team at OSBM as Chief Deputy.

Before joining OSBM, Anca worked for the Duke Center for International Development at Duke University and for the Tax Advisory Group – a consulting firm working with international organizations and foreign governments.

Anca completed her Master's in Public Policy degree at Duke University and, prior to that, received graduate and undergraduate training in Economics in Bulgaria and the Czech Republic. Anca was born and raised in Romania, but was naturalized and became a US citizen in 2012.
